

Gerry Clabby

Gerry Clabby is Principal Advisor at the Department of the Environment, Climate and Communications with responsibility for the provision of technical and scientific advice to support national policy across a wide range of climate and environment areas; for EU programmes including LIFE and the Innovation Fund and for leading the implementation of the Department's Research and Innovation Strategy. Previously, he was Head of Ecological Assessment at the National Parks and Wildlife Service (NPWS) and has also held roles in local government and in academia. Gerry has a BSc in botany and a PhD from University College Dublin.